• Real GDP Growth Rate

From 2016 to 2019, Japanese economy grew due to a virtuous cycle. In 2020, COVID-19 led to negative growth.

The capital investment sector grew for nine consecutive years from 2011 to 2019, but in 2020, COVID-19 led to negative growth for the first time in 10 years.

Machine Tool Orders in Japan (Total Demand)

(Billion Yen, Year over Year)

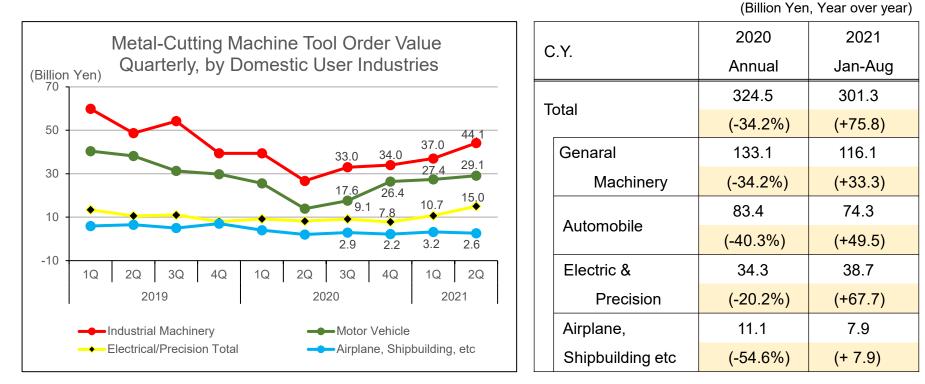

- Orders in 2017 and 2018 were strong because of vigorous capital investment around the world. As a result, orders reached a record high and exceeded 1.8 trillion yen (equivalent to $164 billion, €139 billion) for the first time.
- In 2019, the opaque outlook for the global economy led to deteriorating investment conditions. In 2020, the economic environment suffered a further blow from COVID-19 and it hit bottom in May 2020, and started to recover thereafter.

- Domestic demand in 2019 was affected by the global economy, so that investment stagnated .
- In 2020, with the effects of COVID-19, the situation for capital investment became challenging. Because of becoming apparent of pent-up demand, investment in electrification by the automotive industry, and the rising demand in the semiconductor industry, the need for capital investment was high, and it is believed that this recovery continue in 2021.

Machine Tool Orders in Japan (Foreign Demand)

- Foreign demand fell considerably in 2019. In addition to the trade friction between the U.S. and China, recessions in the major markets caused capital investment to peak out.
- Afer 2nd Quarter of 2019, demand for machine tools in the major markets increase.

У ЈМТВА

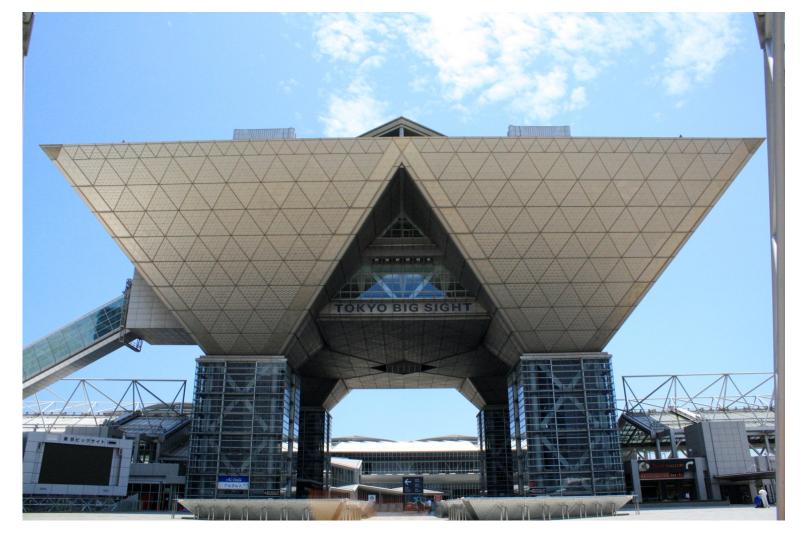

Pros (positive factors)	Cons (negative factors)
 Vigorous capital investment in semiconductor sectors Electrification and the development of autonomous driving in the automotive sector 	 Concern about friction Delays in both establishing countermeasures to COVID-19 and re-establishing economic activities
 Needs for automation and greater efficiency to improve productivity 	• Delivery delays caused by the global shortage of component parts and insufficient quantity of containers for maritime transportation

- The annual order forecast for 2021 at the start of the year was an increase of 33 percent over the previous year to 1.2 trillion yen. In September, the forecast was revised upward to 1.45 trillion yen.
- Capital investment remains strong due to the acceleration of semiconductor-related investment. automobile electrification investments as well as the needs for further automation, greater efficiency and high value-added products.
